DID YOU KNOW? CURRENT BUILDING FAQ

No part of the library has any seismic reinforcement. While the building was built to code at the time that it was constructed, it does not meet today's building codes. The current building is in the Local and Cascadia Tsunami Zones. Without modern retrofitting, the current building and any of its utilities and services are vulnerable to considerable seismic damage in the event of an earthquake. This also presents a significant danger to library patrons, staff, and anyone using the building.

For more information, please visit the Current Building FAQ page on the library's website at coosbaylibrary.org.
